

CHOATE HAS CHEER FOR CONSUMPTIVES

Former Ambassador, as Head of State Charities Aid Association, Makes Report.

BIG DECREASE IN DEATHS

Says Anti-Tuberculosis Societies Are Preparing to Take Up the Fight in Legislature.

The efforts of those engaged in the fight on tuberculosis are surely, if somewhat slowly, making headway. In the opinion of Joseph H. Choate, former Ambassador to England and president of the State Charities Aid Association.

Local tuberculosis hospitals have increased from two to nineteen, public health nurses have increased from two to seventy-nine, free tuberculosis dispensaries have multiplied from two to twenty-six, anti-tuberculosis societies from two to three hundred, and the members of such societies have grown from a handful to ten thousand—all this accomplished within six years!

It is partly on these facts that Mr. Choate bases his optimistic statement, issued yesterday, but it is not altogether on the number of preventive agencies established that he founds his belief in the ultimate defeat of the white plague, for the State Charities Aid Association has concrete evidence of the value of the work undertaken.

The State Department of Health announces that there were 3,350 deaths from consumption in the state outside New York City in the first seven months of 1913, and for the same period of 1912 there were 3,301, forty-nine less. This year for the first seven months there were 3,115, a decrease of 183.

"The reduction," said Mr. Choate, "is most promising, especially in view of the fact that the population of the state has undoubtedly increased."

This is the start of the seventh year of the fight for "No uncurable tuberculosis in New York State in 1915."

Mr. Choate's announcement continues, in part: "The past has been fruitful in achievement; the future promises even more. For instance, with nineteen local tuberculosis hospitals in successful operation in fifteen counties, no reasonable doubt can be held as to the wisdom of the local hospital plan."

"With seventy-nine visiting nurses working successfully in fifty-four localities, carrying a message of hope and cheer to families where before there had been hopelessness and misery, discovering cases of tuberculosis that would not otherwise have been found until hope of recovery had gone, instructing families to care for themselves, so that the danger of infection may be reduced to a minimum—with fifty-four communities doing this work successfully we may feel sure that every other community will make no mistake in following their example."

"With twenty-six dispensaries furnishing free diagnoses to persons unable to pay for it we have absolute proof that there are a most important factor in conserving the most valuable of the community's natural resources—the health of its people. We can now present our arguments for more dispensaries, confident that public officials, swayed by the example of other communities, will make the necessary appropriations."

"The extent to which the people of the state are aroused is indicated by the readiness with which needed legislation has been secured, undesirable legislation defeated and the needed funds provided from public and private sources."

"I believe you will find public officials ready to cooperate in even greater degree than in the past."

Mr. Choate closed with an appeal for an energetic campaign this fall for county hospitals and other preventive measures.

Trying to give your Fall overcoat the slip? What's the use? Coolish days are inevitable. So are Fall overcoats. Including such common sense coats as our "Scotch Mists"—rainproofed Scotch cheviots.

These "Scotch Mists," by the way, are a most obliging weight—light enough for Fall, yet plenty warm for real cold weather.

It's caught on—this new idea for business and semi-formal dress.

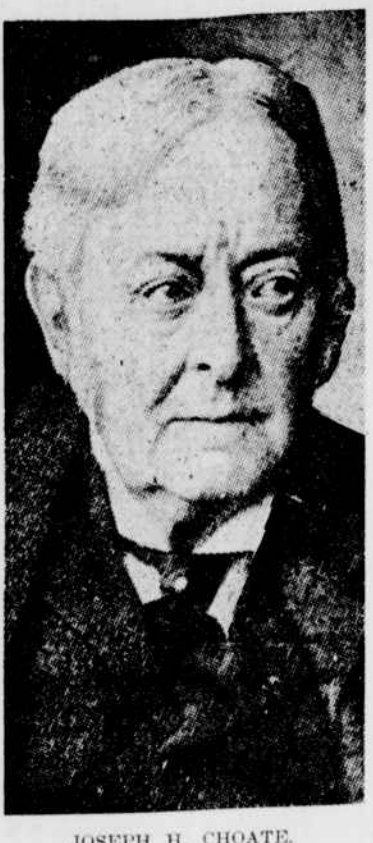

Oxford coat and vest with gray striped trousers.

Everything men and boys wear.

SAY BOMB DRAGNET HOLDS UNION LEADER

Gang Trail Leads Back, Detectives Assert, to Strike Troubles Last Spring.

The police dragnet is fast closing in on one prominent labor leader identified with the United Garment Workers as the head of a ring of labor union men who hired some of the bomb throwers' gang, eleven of which are now in custody.

In addition to hiring the gang to explode bombs in the factories of those garment manufacturers who refused to come to the terms of the union and persisted in employing strike breakers, the police are said to have evidence to show that members of the gang were hired to do gun work.

It is not unlikely that one labor leader, who has been implicated by the confessions of some of the gang now in the hands of the police, will be arrested today. The police declare they have sufficient evidence on which to make the arrest, and are only waiting an opportune moment.

Detectives have been on this labor leader's trail ever since last Thursday, and their work has not been in vain, one of the detectives declared last night. In addition, other detectives have been following clues furnished by the bomb throwers that lead to the doors of other labor men.

The first of the bomb jobs they did was on February 3, when Rocco Picciotti, known as "Zump," and Anthony Sadaits, known as Eddie Burke, and Alfred Lehman, known as "Schmitt," went to the garment factory of Sussman, Wallach & Sonnet, at No. 815 5th street.

Prisoners Describe "Jobs." "Zump" and Sadaits told of two other jobs they did for this same labor leader. One was placing a bomb in a garment factory at No. 122 East Houston street on February 16, but the bomb failed to explode. For this job they got $50.

On February 26 the gang exploded a bomb at the factory of Fraubaus Brothers, No. 54 West 15th street. The next day they did the same thing at the factory of Hornthal, Benjamin & Reim, No. 24 East 14th street. For each of these jobs they got $100.

The next job this same labor leader hired the bomb throwers to do was on March 14. On this day they placed a bomb in a garment factory at No. 110 Crosby street. Because they used seven sticks of dynamite in this bomb, more than double the usual allowance of explosive, the bomb men demanded $150 and received it.

On September 16 last, during a strike at the garment works of Klee & Co., Lafayette and 4th streets, the gang exploded a bomb. When this did not bring the company to terms, a second bomb was exploded a week later in the company's factory at Lyndhurst, N. J.

Another job that the gang did—four of them were implicated in this, and of which they are very proud—was the breaking up of a meeting that "Big Bill" Haywood, Joseph G. Ettor, Carlo Tresca and other firebrands of the I. W. W. attended.

Broke Up Meeting. This was on July 12 last. The meeting was in the basement of Webster Hall. It was called by some dissatisfied members of the United Garment Workers' Union who wanted to become affiliated with the I. W. W.

Ernest Bohm, an official of the Central Federated Union, said last night, that he did not believe that any one connected with the United Garment Workers' Union had anything to do with the hiring of the bomb throwers. He intimated that the bombs might have been placed in the factories by the "bosses" to create a feeling against the strikers. Bohm was asked if he had heard anything of the breaking up of the I. W. W. meeting in Webster Hall last July and he replied:

"I was in Beethoven Hall when that occurred. We were holding a meeting of one of the locals of the United Garment Workers' Union when I heard from one of our men that some things had broken up a meeting in Webster Hall and had gone to Arlington Hall and broken up another. The bosses may have hired these thugs to do the gun work, as they did not want the men to join any union. Some of the garment workers in Arlington Hall or in Webster Hall were associated with our union. They were from another union."

Confessions from Eight. The police announced yesterday that they had almost complete confessions from eight of the eleven prisoners now under arrest. They admit exploding at least eight bombs since the first of the year, and that their bomb activities and the blackmail practised on their own account, along with their other crimes, netted them between $2,000 and $3,000.

They set fire to houses at the request of owners who wanted to collect insurance, and one particular case which "Schmitt" and "Zump" confessed to firing was that of a Brooklyn barber. "Zump," in telling the story, said:

"We got $200 for that job. Five of us were in on it. 'Schmitt' and me did the actual work. We went inside and soaked papers with benzine and 'Schmitt' set fire to it with a torch lamp. While we were at work a man passed in the street. We thought he saw us, but he didn't. We were prepared to do murder, if necessary, to get away. But it wasn't."

Under General McAlpin as grand marshal, the parade will start at 11 o'clock in the morning, and will be reviewed by Mayor Kline of New York. The signal for the start of the parade will be three short blasts on the fire alarm whistle, while the sextons of the churches have been asked to set their bells ringing at the same signal.

Today's features of the celebration will be in the nature of a joint observance of the centennial of Ossining and of the 421st anniversary of the landing of Columbus. In the parade there will be the Christopher Columbus and other Italian societies, and at night the Italians will give the usual Columbus Day evening display of fireworks near the Westchester Bridge, on North Highland avenue.

The order of the parade will be as follows: First Division—General Edwin A. McAlpin, grand marshal, and aids; naval militia and American Boy Scouts.

Second Division—Charles W. Freeman, marshal; village and town officials and invited guests, Grand Army of the Republic, Sons of Veterans; civic, fraternal and labor organizations, including the Masonic fraternity; Odd Fellows, Royal Arcanum, Eagles, Junior Order of American Mechanics, Masons and Bricklayers' Union.

Third Division—James Seward, marshal; Ossining Fire Department and visiting companies.

Fourth Division—John P. Powers, marshal; Knights of Columbus, escorting Holy Name Society, Catholic Benevolent Legion, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Pastime Club and parishioners of St. Augustine's Church.

Fifth Division—Michael Delfino, marshal; Christopher Columbus and George Washington societies and visiting organizations from Croton.

The six divisions will form as follows: First Division—Main street, right resting on Water street. Second—Water street, right resting on Main street. Third—Central avenue, right resting on Water street. Fourth—Broadway, right resting on Water street. Fifth—North Water street, right resting on Snowden avenue. Sixth—North Highland avenue, right resting on North Malcolm street.

One of the chief features on the line of march will be the children of the city schools, who will be dressed and formed to represent a great American flag on the Spring street lawn of the Park school.

Two Killed at Parade Boy and Girl Run Down by Autos in Newark.

In her anxiety to witness the Holy Name Society parade in Newark yesterday, Dorothy Hughes, six years old, of No. 392 Central avenue, was killed by an automobile driven by Edward W. Moore, seventy-one years old, of Santa Barbara, Cal., who two days ago completed a cross-continent tour in the machine. Moore was paroled until this morning to answer a charge of manslaughter. He has been staying at the home of his nephew, Horatio B. Young, at No. 72 South Clinton street, East Orange.

His victim was the daughter of Frank Hughes, a tool maker, who has been out of work more than a year because of ill health and has been confined to his bed for the last six weeks.

Later in the day Antonio Carchio, ten years old, of No. 601 5th street, while on his way home after the parade, was killed by an automobile owned and driven by Percy Roden, of Kappock street, Spuyten Duyvil. Roden was arrested and will be charged with manslaughter to-day.

FIGHT TO SAVE BECKER ON Counsel for Ex-Police Lieutenant Send Brief to Court.

Counsel for Charles Becker, now in the death chair at Sing Sing, awaiting the electric chair for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, have begun their fight to save their client from the death sentence. The brief in the case of the People vs. Charles Becker was sent to the clerk of the Court of Appeals last Saturday afternoon, and will be on file this morning. It consists of 271 typewritten pages.

The principal contention made in the briefs, which were compiled jointly by Joseph A. Shay and Leonard F. Fish, attorneys for Becker, is that the innocence of the prisoner has been affirmatively established by the story of the four principal witnesses against him.

District Attorney Whitman was served with copies of the briefs on Saturday. Assistant District Attorney Taylor, who will write the brief and argue the case for the people, has made application for an adjournment of two weeks in order to answer the defendant's brief. The case is set down for argument to-day, but the court will doubtless grant the adjournment sought by the District Attorney's office.

One of the points taken up by the brief relates to the testimony of "Sam" Schepps in which he alleged he had an interview with Lieutenant Becker at Becker's home on the Wednesday night following the murder. This supposed interview is characterized as an invention of Schepps's own mind.

The testimony of Hallon and Luban, who were prisoners in the Tombs at the time Becker was confined there, is alleged in the brief to be "a detestable and odious attempt on their part to sell perjury for a reduction of their own sentences or expected sentences."

BABY DEDICATED AS MISSIONARY TO CHINA

Robert, Year-Old Son of Dr. R. H. Glover, Goes Through Ceremony at Tabernacle—Dr. Simpson Raises $43,142 Through His Appeal.

Asserting that heathenism is growing more rapidly than Christianity, and that the matter is one of life and death to the world, the Rev. Dr. A. B. Simpson, son of a great congregation at the Gospel Tabernacle, 44th street and Eighth avenue, yesterday morning that at the close of his address $43,142 was subscribed for missions. The contributions ranged from $4,000 to $1, and so eager were some to give that they went forward before the speaker's appeal was ended.

"God does not want the loose change in your pockets," said the minister. "He wants the red blood of sacrifice. He is your biggest creditor; you owe Him before anybody else. He couldn't save the world cheaply. Don't be afraid of going too far."

The most striking incident of the occasion was the dedication of a one-year-old boy as a missionary. He is Robert P. Glover, the son of Dr. R. H. Glover, who is stationed as a missionary in Central China.

It was the annual missionary rally of the Tabernacle, and was a success in every way, although it did not prove to be a record collection for Dr. Simpson. At Old Orchard Beach, Me., in August, 1899, at the close of the Christian Alliance Society's convention, he raised $120,000. At the same place, in 1910, he raised $61,000 by a talk of sixty-one minutes. In October, 1909, at the Tabernacle, he raised $64,000.

"The great doors to many lands are open to us," said Dr. Simpson, "but there are many adversaries. The situation is so full of unparalleled opposition that it calls for instant, prompt and persevering action. It is not a question of civil government, the New York election or of saving babies from epidemic or one of social reform, but one of life and death for the whole world."

"Since we have gathered here a million have died. In this country there is a minister for every 1,100 persons. In Africa there is a minister for every 800,000. There are in some parts of the world as many as 8,000,000 beings without a ray of light and without a single minister to show the way. There are more than 120,000,000 persons in China and in Africa who have not yet been reached by the word of God."

"The open mind of the East will not await your convenience in giving them the message. To-day Japan is turning from Shintoism, but not to God. In their institutions of learning there are a great many agnostics. In Argentina they have turned their backs on God and are giving themselves to occultism, to philosophy, to agnosticism. The call for missionaries is world-wide."

The order of the parade will be as follows: First Division—General Edwin A. McAlpin, grand marshal, and aids; naval militia and American Boy Scouts.

Second Division—Charles W. Freeman, marshal; village and town officials and invited guests, Grand Army of the Republic, Sons of Veterans; civic, fraternal and labor organizations, including the Masonic fraternity; Odd Fellows, Royal Arcanum, Eagles, Junior Order of American Mechanics, Masons and Bricklayers' Union.

Third Division—James Seward, marshal; Ossining Fire Department and visiting companies.

MISS ELEANOR SPENCER.

AMERICAN PIANIST TO PLAY

Miss Eleanor Spencer to Arrive from Europe To-day.

Miss Eleanor Spencer, an American pianist, who has been abroad for eight years, will arrive this morning on board the Rotterdam. Despite her long absence from this country, it is a pretty safe guess to make that her first question ashore will be:

"Who won the world's series?"

Miss Spencer is an enthusiastic follower of baseball.

While abroad Miss Spencer studied in Austria and Germany, and she has appeared in practically all of the European musical centers. She was soloist in famous orchestras in Vienna, Stuttgart and Berlin. Her most recent appearance was in London.

Antonia Sawyer, who will meet Miss Spencer, is to manage the young pianist's fall tour here, which begins at Carnegie Hall on November 11.

$50,000 ROUSSEAU GONE

Two Years Spent in World-Wide Hunt for Missing Painting.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 12.—The mysterious disappearance of a painting by Rousseau, said to be valued at $50,000, and two years' unsuccessful search for it in two continents have been revealed by the filing of papers here in a damage suit brought by Walter H. Gibbons, an art dealer of Newport and New York.

The painting was owned by the late Walter Richmond, of this city, who turned it over to a Providence company to be restored. While in their hands it disappeared.

Gibbons at the time was in the employ of the restoring company, and it is from that company that he seeks to recover damages of $10,000. He alleges that after leaving the firm, in 1911, he was hounded by detectives for two years, his business ruined, his reputation injured, and that on April 21 last he was arrested and held for forty-eight hours at the police station here.

MR. ROCKEFELLER A "DRY"

Would Vote for Anti-Liquor Proposals in Ohio.

[By Telegram to The Tribune.] Cleveland, Oct. 12.—John D. Rockefeller is a "dry." He was one of the most interested listeners at the morning services at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church to-day when Wayne B. Wheeler, of Columbus, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, made an address earnestly asking support for the "dry" side of two constitutional amendments at the election November 4.

At the close of Mr. Wheeler's address Mr. Rockefeller hurried down to the rostrum and was the first to shake hands with the "dry" orator. He also spoke with the Rev. A. S. Gregg, of the American Civic Reform Union, and cordially greeted several of his old friends.

"I am for temperance, always," said Mr. Rockefeller, "and although I am a legal resident of New York state, and therefore cannot vote here on these two anti-liquor proposals next month, I am heartily in favor of them, and would certainly vote on the 'dry' side were I an Ohio voter."

COLER ASSAILS SCHOOLS

By Eliminating Religion Socialism Is Aided, He Declares.

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 12.—In observance of the anniversary of Lawrence's flag day of one year ago, when 30,000 men, women and children paraded the streets as a protest against the display of the "No God, No Master" banners of the Industrial Workers of the World, the opera house was crowded at a meeting to-night. Bird S. Coler, of New York, ex-President of the Borough of Brooklyn, was the principal speaker.

"We are aiding socialism vastly by taking religion out of our public schools," said Mr. Coler. "We are spending millions of money for an educational system which has no religious content. We are turning out of these public schools for which we pay so much money graduates who believe that science has demolished religion, whose training has been given with the object of preparing for material success."

"Let every creed control its own schools and let the state pay per capita for the education of each child so educated. Let even the agnostics maintain their own educational institutions; let there be no injustice to any class or creed."

Table Linens At "The Linen Store"

This department has been very much enlarged during the summer and we are enabled, consequently, to show our extensive and unequalled assortment to the very best advantage.

There are upwards of 400 designs to select from. Some of these have been old favorites with our customers for many years, while others are being shown for the first time this season.

The variety of sizes is so great that we can imagine no requirement that cannot be readily supplied at "The Linen Store."

Among the new designs this season are the Royal Ermine Celtic Art Cube Centre, Empire with Cube Centre and a new Shower of Pearl; also Pekin Stripe with new border and Thistle and Scroll.

Plain Damask Cloths with Satin Bands and Cloths with stripes of different widths are still very smart and may be had in great variety.
